COPYRIGHT STATEMENT

The copyright law of the United States - Title 17, United States Code - concerns the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the photocopy or other reproduction is not to be "used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research." If a user makes a request for, or later uses, a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," that user may be liable for copyright infringement.

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copy order if, in its judgement, fulfillment of the order would involve violation of the copyright law.

THE VIVISECTION OF DOGS.

By J. WOODROFFE HILL, Esq., F.R.C.V.S.

(Reprinted by special permission from "Our Canine Companions.")

"I have not the slightest sympathy with the aims and aspirations of vivisectors, because I believe they are based upon false assumptions founded upon the very essence of cruelty. To do evil that good may come is bad from every point of view. To repay those creatures to whom we owe so much by submitting them to every known physiological experiment is, to say the least of it, an iniquitous reward for their devotion and faithful services.

"Few medical practitioners have the courage to express their dissent anent vivisection—all honour to those who have. Personally I care nought for the contrary opinions of men in my own profession as to the position I have always taken in this matter. I am an animal-lover, and no animal-lover can be a vivisector even with all the wealth accruing from the supposed discoveries awaiting him. Beyond this, however, I hold it is the bounden duty of the strong to protect the weak.

"Bully is a strong term to use, but it is nevertheless exceedingly applicable to the individual who crucifies a poor animal for his own selfish gratification. What good to mankind can follow the knowledge that a frog immersed in sea-water is agitated, or that the gastric juice of a dog would dissolve a rabbit's ear?

"Fancy taking a dog whose companionship you have enjoyed, upon which every endearment has been lavished, whose cleverness and sagacity have amused and interested you, and at your invitation follows you without fear into a laboratory, and then securing him to a board, you exclaim, 'Now, to discover something for my own benefit, I am going to open you alive and make a series of experiments!' Where, then, is your appreciation of the unstinted affection lavished on you by this dumb creature and your gratitude to the Author of its being? Can you, when the summons comes, go before Him with a clean conscience? Yet such acts occur daily in physiological laboratories. Well, if there is a hereafter, rest assured that cruelty by man to animals, whether dogs or otherwise, will be rewarded by many stripes."
